Entertainment given by the Juniors
Very successful & amusing. The concluding song sung to the tune of the Tin Glee fee - the clash of sloyd tools etc. (some of which for ever ruined) was capital.

The Backward Child - which has been acted before was very well done.

The position of the stage was altered to the windows. This is a great improvement as it makes a much more picturesque place
than when arranged near the door

Concluding Song. 21P4 CMC 61

Chorus—

Oh! we are a jolly lot, for we do not care a jot
What the greedy world may say of 'us'
And the ballast of us all without whom we'd have a squale
Is our dainty darling Bigee Washee—

Chorus—

Solo verse sung by Bigee Washee

I'm an artistic Chinese, from across the sea—
From the land of the Pagoda & the Sea
Of "Blots" I heard the fame. I've staked my Chinese name
That "Blots" won't conquer Bigee Washee.

Chorus—

Solo verse sung by Miss S. Lloyd.

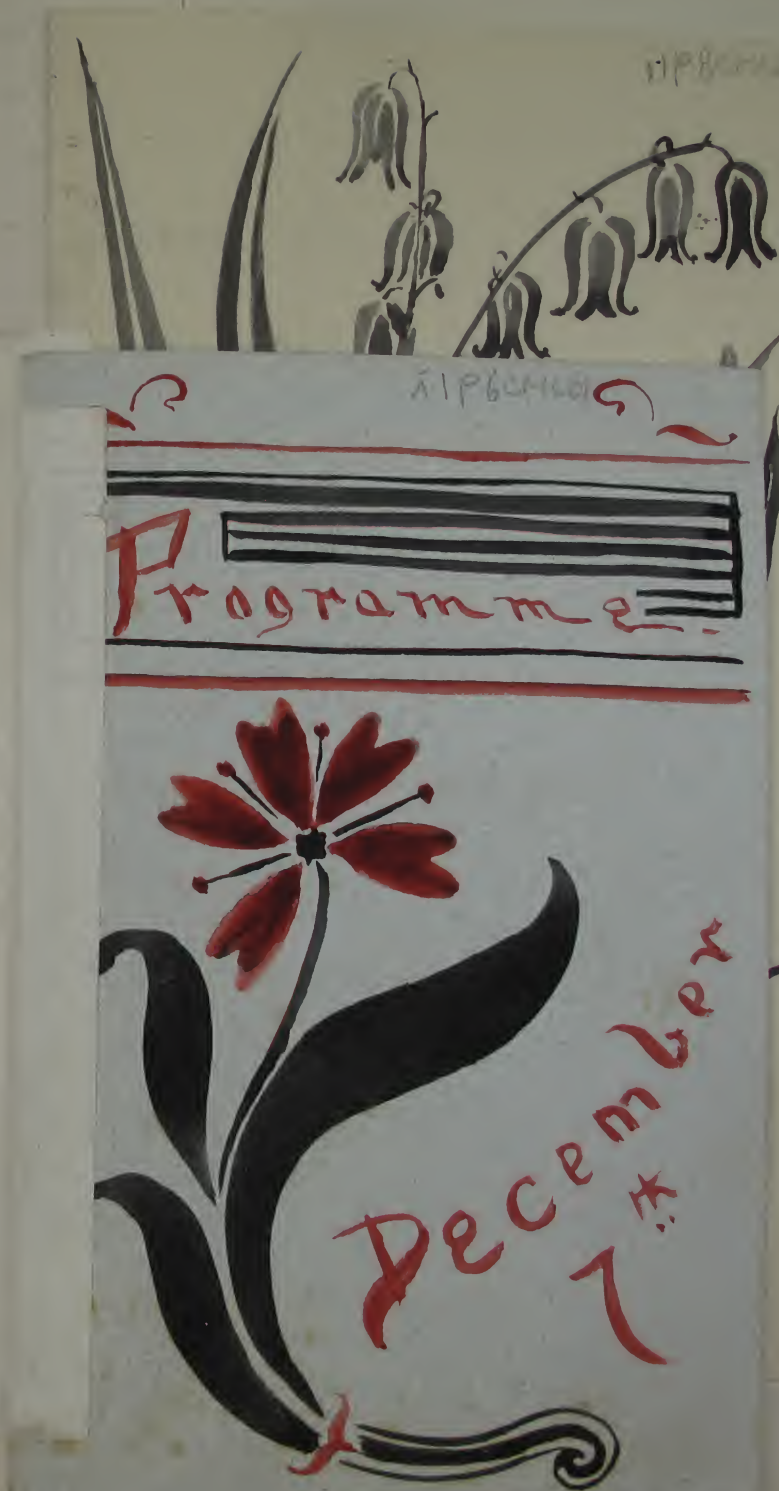

I think that I must state, though perhaps it's rather late
That I highly disapprove of L. K.
our triangular sitting will of course
take place.
And really I have nothing more to say.

Annual Entertainment & Dance.

This was good, but not nearly as amusing as some of our entertainments.

The first part consisting of Swedish dances w<sup>d</sup> have been better without any words at all - merely the dances.

The dresses were most interesting being real old costumes.

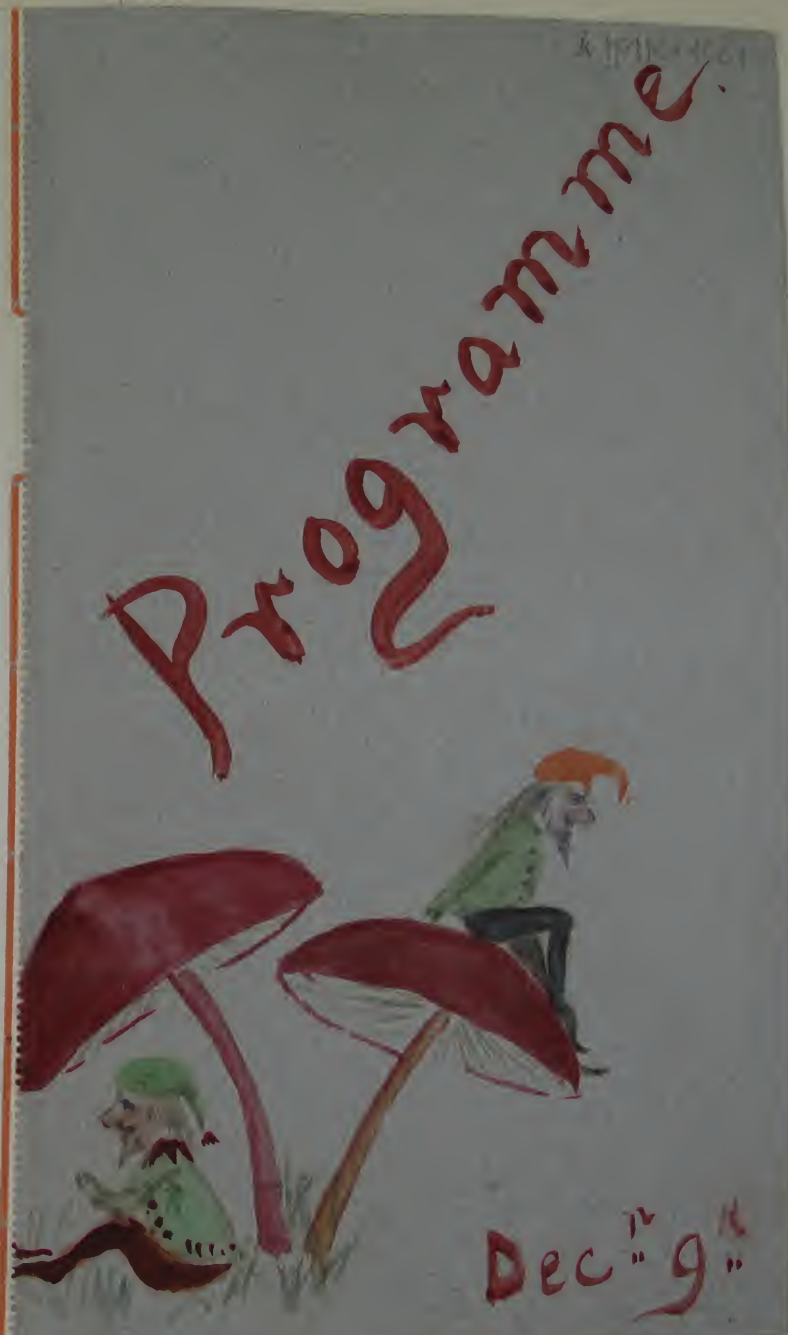

In the second part Miss Meuse was capital as the show woman.

The Tableau was very good.

Most of the outsiders left after supper & left more soon for dancing.

woman who has lost her spectacles.

6) Tableau - Parents & Children.

Miss Devonshire represented a most
P. V. E. U mother in humble circumstances with a charming baby & several other children.

Tuesday February 20th

Miss Bradley arranged the reading of "Winter's Tale", which we all enjoyed very much. The contrast between "Winter's Tale" which closes to happily & the shifting scenes & pictures of ~~the~~ King John was remarked by all, while a comparison between Desdemona & Othello & Hermione & Leontes is inevitable.

Miss Mence who had shone so brightly as the irrepressible Faulconbridge - with his eternal calfskin - in King John, made an excellent Autolycus, though, to everyone's regret, much of his part had been cut out.

As this was the beginning of the winter break an entertainment was arranged for the evening.

The school girls of Classes III & IV gave half & the juniors filled up the rest of the term.

First came a pretty step dance by Kathleen & <sup>Joseph</sup> Clendinning. This was followed by a short original farce in one scene.

The persons were Staffordshire foundrymen's wives & one child, and the humour of the piece lay in the costumes, which were grotesquely realistic, in the dialect, which was unspeakably provincial & in the hypocrisy of the heroine, Kathleen Clendinning. ~~who~~ This lady is enjoying a substantial tea, when the curtain rises & soliloquizes in the joy of being left in peace & not bothered by such neighbours as Mrs So & So

In honour of the Relief of Ladysmith a grand display of fireworks took place on the drive before the house. The night was fine but dark so rockets, Roman candles & Catherine wheels etc. were seen to advantage. "Hail Britannia", "Soldiers of the Queen" & "God Save the Queen" were most heartily sung & ringing cheers given for the Queen, General Roberts, White, Kitcheners etc.

Fancy Dress Ball.

February 26th 1900

At tea time we decided to wind up the half term break with a fancy dress dance. It was most exciting work making costumes out of whatever was at hand, but the result was most satisfactory.

The following is a list of characters:-

Mr. Elph	King of The Cannibal Island
Miss Kitching	Aunt Matthe
" Laurence	Aunt Ephemia
" Morrison	Greek Lady

+ Mrs Somebody Else. As this junction comes a knock at the door. Mrs Jones carefully removes the cake from the table & admits Mrs So & S. (Winifred Tibbits) & her child (Mary Perce). Apologising for scanty fare she bids them make themselves at home, & then they fall to gossiping about Mrs Somebody Else. This much slendered lady then turns up: Mrs So & So & child vanish into the kitchen & the hidden cake is audibly demolished. A funny touch was Mrs Jones's frantic attempt to hide the bonnet which Mrs So & So had left on the table. The end was a fine quarrel in which the old hypocrite got the worst of it.

The second half of the evening was occupied by Shakespear Tableaux arranged by Miss Devonshire, & most of them after well known pictures. They were all so delightful that it is hard to say which was the most successful.

Literary Evening March 7th 1900
Matthew Arnold.

Miss Kerr read a most interesting paper on Matthew Arnold, viewing him as a man, a poet and a critic. She gave a delightful account of his boyhood spent among the mountains with his father and brother. His love for his father was intense, and he must have missed him terribly when he died. Miss Kerr read Rusby Chapel as illustrating his (Matthew's) feelings on his father's death. Other poems were read by different members of the House in illustration of his melancholy disposition, his great love of nature, etc.

Miss Kerr gave a short description of his work as an educator which was afterwards discussed. This seemed to be the least important part of his life.

His work as a critic was then taken up, and Miss Hammond read extracts from "Essays in Criticism" on Poetry.

We all felt that Matthew Arnold must have been a great character and that for the time being at any <sup>rate</sup> we were the better for having it so well placed before us. There was not a dull sentence in the whole of this Kerr's paper. We are very grateful to her.

Literary Evening
Victor Hugo

March 21st 1900

On the evening of the 21st March Miss Hammond read a paper on Victor Hugo the representative of the modern French school of Romantic authors. The first part of the paper was a biographical sketch, after which his works were considered critically - his marvellous descriptive powers, and the vividness of his colouring were well illustrated by carefully chosen extracts from his prose and poetical works. The scene from 'Les Misérables' in which Cosette receives a visit from a sympathetic stranger, the poems 'L'Expiação', 'Les Jins', 'L'Églon' etc. were read by Mademoiselle Chottu and some others present.

Miss Hammond was in perfect sympathy with her subject, & imparted some of her own enthusiasm to her listeners. Even those of us who were not well acquainted with Victor Hugo's life work got a very good idea of ### Children's party.

A most lovely day. We had tea at little tables on the lawn. The usual bazaar on the terrace appeared to give great satisfaction. especially the students' sweet stall.

The children got up a capital entertainment. The costumes were most ingenious.

Some danced very nicely. Nora had taken great pains to teach her.

The same costumes were used throughout.

The whole thing was very effective - The Mothers beamed with pride & delight.

A very entertaining evening. The acting was capital.

An Election Farce.

The Rural Candidates' wives called at the various houses in the village & asked for votes for their husbands. A concert was given at which various villagers gave songs or recitations - see programme. Miss Bagnall was excellent as the vulgar spoilt child - Miss Devonshire was most realistic as a nervous country girl - with a monstrous red bow at the back of her neck - & roses in her hair. The noise made in the street after the speeches was truly appalling - & considering the number of actors it was a credit to their lungs!
